1. In mid-January 1954, the East German Ministry of Railroads had issued the following secret order:
  - a. For the duration of the Four-Power Conference a trouble-shooting service for telecommunications installations will be established at the Ministry of Railroads.
  - b. Special fire fighting details will be ready for employment at any time.
  - c. The translation bureau of the Ministry will be occupied 24 hours every day.
  - d. The operations departments of the Ministry of Railroads will organize a special operations staff which will go into action in the event of incidents.
  - e. Effective immediately, no leave will be granted to any employee of the Ministry. All high-ranking employees from Referent up to Hauptabteilungsleiter must be within reach of telephone communication and ready for duty at all times.
  - f. The teletype center and the Basa switchboard are to be guarded by reliable personnel day and night.
  - g. Guards assigned to special railroad installations will be reinforced.
  - h. The compliance with these orders will be reported by noon on 20 January. Employees responsible for the execution of the orders will be reported in writing to the Minister of Railroads. All personnel involved in these measures will have to sign a written statement that they will observe the strictest secrecy in all matters connected with the orders given and that they will do their utmost to safeguard the safety of the German Democratic Republic.
